

FOR JUST KING AND ANOTHER COUNTRY

The first world war ended 100 years ago. If you wish to remember those who died, pay your respects to those who fought and honour those who survived, then come to the Service of Remembrance at Streatham War Memorial on the corner of the High Road and Streatham Common North Side at 10.30 on Sunday 11th November 2018.

Five million non-British personnel fought for Britain in the second world war. All volunteers, with the majority coming from India and Africa plus a huge contribution from the West Indies and other commonwealth countries.
